

Call for Editor: Journalism & Communication Monographs

Applications must be received by April 1, 2024

Journalism & Communication Monographs is seeking to hire a new, innovative editor with fresh ideas in advancing the journal.

Responsibilities include working with authors to develop sound, broad-reaching, ambitious proposals; providing beneficial feedback on proposals; working with authors to develop publishable monographs; coordinating four issues per year; handling all correspondence relative to the publication; soliciting commentaries by prestigious scholars; cooperating with the AEJMC Central Office on business and budget matters affecting the journal; reporting to and working with the Publications Committee on the continuous development of the journal; and preparing an annual report. The editor will work with the production and promotion representatives of the publisher.

Editors are appointed for four-year terms and receive an annual honorarium of $5,000. The editor will receive additional funding to support an editorial assistant and travel.

Applicants must be AEJMC members in good standing. They should also be able to write and edit clearly and concisely; possess a strong commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion; have an understanding and appreciation of a broad range of research methods; have extensive knowledge of the literature of mass communication; and be housed in a department or school that is eager to cooperate in this publishing venture with special reference to such considerations as office space, travel, use of equipment and provision of student and/or staff assistance.

Applications must be received by April 1, 2024, via email, to Teri Finneman, Publications Committee editor's search subcommittee chair, at finnemte@gmail.com.

Applicants should submit a CV and a two-page letter that outlines interest in the position, qualifications, and what institutional support the applicant would have. Finalists will be asked to provide an official letter of support from their institution.

Anyone with questions can contact Finneman for more information.
